The process from design through construction is often as exhausting as it is exciting. Knowing this, it becomes important to partner with a firm that is flexible, smart and most importantly, one that cares. REDCO Engineering is just that type of company. Greg Redington and his staff have proven themselves to be leaders in the Design/Build format which not only gives the client an affordable building but also a flexible and fluid process. During the years of designing and building our beautiful new addition, REDCO proved that throughout the process they were there to support and guide us, and sometimes even challenged us to look beyond our immediate needs ...but most importantly they cared about getting it right for the programs, staff, and most importantly, for the students of The Midland School.
